THE EDITOR OF THE MISSOURI DEMOCRAT RELEASED .- Mr. McKee, the Editor of the Missouri Democrat, has been released from arrest. It will be remembered that he was President's letter removing General Curtis, for publication. The special order releasing him states that his parole is no longer bindplanation. Mr. McKee in an editorial thinks there is considerable coolness in the order, as he has never made any apology or explanation whatever, but per contra has invariably refused so to do.

THE DRAFT .- Important circulars from the Provost Marshal-General relating to the draft are published. Drafted men are considered soldiers in the service of the United States as soon as their names have been drawn. Men claiming exemption by reason of any disability have the right to have the question of their disability submitted to and passed upon by the Board of Enrolment; if the board decides them liable to serve they still have the right, after such decision, to pay the commutation or to furnish substitutes within such extended time as may be fixed by the board.

FER FOUR DAYS .- A man who had ost for four days in a coal mine in Derire, England, was rescued the other day. His entire sustenance for ninety-one hours was the oil from his lamp, which he sucked up. Although much exhausted when found, he soon revived, and, after a little food had een administered, he walked home. It ap-Macready, the tragedian, is dead. He was born in London in 1793, appeared on the stage at the age of seventeen, and eventually became the leading actor of Great Britair. Despite his mannerism, his bad voice, and ungainly person, he was very effective in a very wide range of characters. He visited this country three times-in 1826, 1843, and 1848—and his last performance here resulted in the well-remembered Astor Place Riot, in which twenty-two persons were killed and thirty-six wounded.

The citizen scouts of Parkersburg, Western Virginia, met one or two small squads of Morgan's men on the south side of the Ohio, and, upon asking them where they are going, received the reply, "We don't w, and don't care a damn." They seemed erfectly worn out-exhausted from want of sleep, but their answer was significant; for the great mass of the rebels never have known what they were doing or where going, and ently don't care much.

I am rapidly convalescing, and am fairly and safely out of the clutches of the diligent disciple of Esculapius, who surfeited me with nauseating panaceas until the remedy seemed far more oppressive than the disease. It is no longer a matter of surprise to me that faces in hospitals wear such a ghastly, sepulchral paleness.

A ticket to the hospital is almost an introduction to the graveyard; not that all the attentions, comforts, &c., possible under the circumstances, are not afforded, but that they are so vastly, so incomparably inferior to those of ome that the comparison itself is dispiriting, tion, the hearse, the rattle of the clods upon the coffin lid, the farewell volley of his fellow-soldiers, and the epitaph, rather than of re-covery and the joys in store at the reunion with the loved ones at home. Apropos of hospitals and invalids, might I not suggest, without incurring the censure of being med-dlesome, that a system of furloughing for a limited length of time might be inaugurated to the good of hundreds of sick soldiers in camp, who are lingering out a painful existence, of no service to the army in their present condition, but an expense and a burden. arrest. It will be remembered that he was arrested by General Schofield for refusing to divulge the source whence he obtained the who are unable to keep up afoot, with the army on the march. Sickness has unnerved and weakened them, until they have no strength, no heart to work, nothing to inspirit him states that his parole is no longer bind-ing, as he has made sufficient apology and ex-of hope to illumine the dark repulsive void hat engulfs and hides a sick man in camp.

A Surgeon becomes unpopular with the authorities if he frequently recommends disabled men for furloughs, and until his philanthropy, the finer and commendable feelings of his normal nature, are crushed and sacrificed to what is accommodatingly termed the xigencies of the service, he is the wrong man

If I sat in my easy chair at Headquarters, writing protests to some of the applications that I know have been refused, I should feel that my signature was being affixed to so many death warrants, and that the Recording Angel was jotting down a record "of inhamanity to man," dangerous to my peace of soul in the world to come.

I would not purposely breathe an insinuation against the integrity of those in whose hands these matters rest. But in this reference to the subject I have eased my mind of a burden that has long been upon it, and done simple justice to those poor fellows, who have simple justice to those poor fellows, who have been so long removed from her presence, that her existence remains only in glimmerings, that yet confusedly come from memory's store-room, of a wooden statue grasping even

An Invitation to Dine in Vicksburg from Gen. Grant.—The Dubuque (Iowa) Times publishes the following: On the 28th of June, a gentleman residing in Galena, a warm, personal friend of Gen. Grant, received a letter from the commander of the troops before Vicksburg, in which was enclosed an invitaroad so worn by the wagon-trains, as to be almost impassable to a horseman, we emerged into a cultivated valley, through which crept his voice and vote were against seceding. He was denounced as a traitor to the South, and when the rebel army occupied the country his property was taken without remuneration.

When the Federals entered he felt secure against lawless seizures of property, and enjoyed relief. Our army passed his house along the same road that it travelled a year before, but with far different results. His protestations of friendship and sympathy fell as coldly upon the ears of the pillagers as though their hearts had become calloused to the appeals of humanity. The stragglers passed, and with them, who must have forgotten their own litle ones at home, went the last pound of provisions that the family had. Provender is precious in this country where so little can be found, and I feel proud to know that the sentiments of the better portion of the troops accorded with the spirit of the order, issued from neadquarters, prohibiting under heavy penal-y the practice of plundering and pillaging. I noticed that wherever friends to our cause were found by foraging parties, rightly instructed and honestly disposed, private property is most sacredly respected. I regret that all soldiers on similar errands are not possessed and actuated by equally laudable motives and principles.

I made it a point to stop and make inquiry at every house we passed, in the hope to learn something reliable of the feelings of the peo-ple in regard to the issue of the war. I found a large number of indigent families, compris-ing often four, five, and frequently a half dozen little tow-haired children, who had lost their protector in battle. Whenever I inquired "Where is your father?" one of the children, or the mother, would quickly reply, "O, you all killed him at the battle of Murfreesboro." I was surprised to witness the unaffected, firm, and unfaltering manner in which the family spoke of the loss of the dear ones. This stoic indifference to be eavement, that I would only have looked for in the character that history gives to the Spartan or Sarscen mother. ry gives to the Spartan or Saracen mother, amounts in some cases to a superlative indifference to disaster that I cannot contemplate without emotions of surprise and wonder. It must not be inferred, either, that there is no affection where this sternness of heart in the presence of misfortune displays itself. A more affectionate people, as evidenced in the letters we capture, cannot be found. A mail bag, it has been said, will unveil the hearts of a people, and exhibit with unerring truthfulness their character. The numerous mails we have captured display qualities of heart, when re-ferred to the ties of affection between families and friends, highly commendatory of the peo-

The prevailing impression in regard to the war is; that, although the South will be able to prosecute the war for years yet, she had better if possible seek an early adjustment of the questions at issue on the basis of a return to the Union, with certain amendments to the Constitution that shall forever remove from Congress, and out of reach of a possibility of

The establishment of the Confederacy as a government would, I believe, be considered as ample recompense for the total destruction of the system of slavery, that was once regarded as the corner stone of their Govern-ment. The common people, who own no slaves, have no interest in the institution, and, nless dazzling prospects, as the concomitant of a new government, can retain their symforce of a lack of interest on the part of the common soldiers. If the hopes of commercial and political greatness, greater freedom, and greater opportunities for an accumulation of individual wealth, attendant on the achievement of Southern independence, and can be painted in sufficiently tempting colors to quiet the disaffection now permeating and disorganizing the rebel armies, the leaders may buoy their sinking fortunes until foreign

The fall of Charleston, which we hopefully look forward to, and which the enemy enter-tains most serious fears of, will hasten the decision of the question, and I am sure none more than the soldiers desire to see it decided. The occupation of Huntsville, Alabama, by our cavalry, seems to have been not unexpected. The citizens hurried off to Georgia all the able-bodied negroes and most valuable stock in that region, thereby defeating, par tially, one of the prime objects of the expedi

The success that has attended the formation into a brigade for fatigue duty of all contra-bands collected through the country has induced the General to add as rapidly as possi-ble to the numbers of the force. To do this, our mounted forces have orders to bring in all negroes who desire to leave their masters and enter the employ of the government.

The rebels seem seriously chagrined at the action of Bragg in relinquishing Tennessee, which is termed the "Confederate granary." Gen. Stanley's pickets held frequent conversations with the rebols guarding the fords on the Tennessee, in which the rebels express their regrets at leaving the State, but the greatest confidence in their cavalry causing us considerable annoyance in Kentucky and in our

The confidence of the Southern people in the impregnability of Vicksburg is truly amazing. Although they have read full and detailed accounts in Northern journals of its capitulation they will not believe that it has surrendered. The importance of the position surrendered. The importance of the position they have been educated to a full appreciation cf. and the tenacity with which they still cling to a hope of its security only measures the inestimable depth of their despair consequent upon its fall.

[Special Despatches to the Louisville Journal.] COLUMBUS, O., July 24. Morgan's forces were undoubtedly divided into two divisions before leaving Cumberland ast night. The largest squad, under command of Morgan himself, left Cumberland yesterday evening at 8 o'clock, pursuing a northeastwardly direction, striking the Central Railroad at Campbell's Station about 7 A. M. to-day, eight miles east of Cambridge. He burned the bridge and depot there and then moved due north toward Washington,

10 A. M., burning country bridges and stealing horses as he moved. He left Washington at 11 A. M., after deliberately feeding his men and horses. He of slavery.

I am constrained to believe from a rather extensive knowledge of sentiment in Tennessee that the South persist in warring, not so much in the hope of saving slavery as the chief end of the contest, as of establishing in the chief end of the contest, as of establishing in the chief end of the contest, as of establishing in the chief end of the contest, as of establishing in the chief end of the contest, as of establishing in the chief end of the contest, as of establishing in the chief end of the contest, as of establishing in the chief end of the contest, as of establishing in the chief end of the contest, as of establishing in the chief end of the contest, as of establishing in the chief end of the contest, as of establishing in the chief end of the contest, as of establishing in the chief end of the contest is the chief end of the contest is the chief end of the contest in the chief end of the contest is the chief end of the contest in the chief end of the cont Hendricksburg, six miles east of Fairview. This takes him up to 4 P. M. Here we lost track of him. He appears to be moving in the direction of Sornesville. If he keeps the road he leaves Bornesville to the right. Of the smaller equad nothing is known further than that they moved due east from Cumberland. It is supposed that he has reached the neighborhood of Sunfish, on the Ohio river, twenty miles below Wheeling, ere this, where the larger squad will join him. Our cavalry will lay behind, not having come up with the enemy, except at Washington, when our advance fell in with Morgan's rear and fired a single round, when the rebels put spurs to their horses and skedaddled out of reach. The State authorities are straining every nerve to circumvent Morgan.

The Governor was in his office all night in nstant communication with General Burnside and the forces in the field. They are in strong hopes that Morgan will be surrounded before reaching the river as before, but the chances are that he may yet cross.

WASHINGTON, July 24. The impression that Meade and Lee are ying with their armies along the banks of the Upper Potomac watching each other, and that the headquarters of Gen. Meade is at Harper's Ferry, or in that region, is a decided mistake. Both armies are active, and Meade is where he can strike Lee a blow when he pleases. A battle is likely to occur at any moment. On the same subject, this evening's Star has the following:

We apprehend there can now be little doubt hat, on Saturday morning last, Lee commenced to move most of his army up the Virginia Valley from the position it had occupied since recrossing the Potomac. He had previously made a feint to recross the Potomac by sending Ewell's command up toward Cumberland. It is to be presumed that the movements of Meade's army, which has been by no means idle of late, is making it necessary for him to hurry off for the protection of his communiation with Richmond. We feel very sure that Meade has those communications already at his mercy. When and how, it is not proper that we should state; at any rate we may not improperly say that Meade is demonstrating that all apprehension of tardiness on his part is entirely groundless. Lee's advance is reported to have been at trasburg on the day before yesterday, and we trust, as we believe, that his whole flank is being daily felt by Meade's cavalry, so that all his movements are immediately known and Memphis. provided against; that these are only statements of the local papers. It need only be added that there is a plentiful lack of knowledge as to army movements | day. on either side, and that the deficiency is being supplemented by the vaguest rumors. MEMPHIS, July 22.

The steamer Planet has just arrived from Port Hudson, having on board 160 rebel officers who are en route for Sandusky via Cairo. When the boat reached Helena twenty-five of the prisoners threw themselves from the guards of the boat into the river for the purpose of effecting their escape. It is supposed that a few of them reached the shore, but the majority of them were drowned. One of the officers, Maj. Hevort, informed me that the entire batch of privates taken at Port Hudson had been paroled, and that before the surrender they suffered extremely for the want of provisions, mule beef being a luxury even at an exorbitant price. General Beall's staff, of the regular army, are expected here this evening on the Imperial. CINCINNATI, July 24. Fourteen hundred more of Morgan's men arrived last night. They will be forwarded to Indianapolis to-day. Twenty-four hundred have arrived altogether. WASHINGTON July 24

The greatest confidence is felt in the plans and movements of General Gillmore and Admiral Dahlgren, and the ultimate capture of Charleston was regarded as an fait accompli. On Thursday, the 16th, a severe fight ocarred between Gen. Blunt and the rebel General Cooper, resulting in the complete oute of the rebels. Finding that the rebels had fallen back from Fort Gibson, Blunt, with twenty-four hundred men and twelve guns, left in pursuit. After marching 50 miles in 24 hours, they d the enemy, 5,000 strong, in position on Elk Creek.

Blunt immediately attacked. Our artillery dismounted two revel guns, which were captured. A charge was finally made, when the enemy fled in confusion.

The National Republican, of this evening, states that positive information has been received here that Lee has been delaying on the Potomac to enable him to get away safely with the plunder he has collected in Maryland and Pennsylvania, and because his force has been gathering new crops of grain in the Shenandoah Valley. He is now moving to-ward Richmond with immense trains of supplies, the necessity for the procuring of which was increased by the fall of Vicksburg and Port Hudson, and is now intensified by the cutting of the Tennessee and Virginia Railroad, which was a great medium for procuring road, which was a great medium for procuring supplies for Lee's army.

DEATH OF MR. CRITTENDEN.-We have received from Frankfort the painful intelligence that Mr. Crittenden is dead. He died vesterday morning at three o'clock. This intelligence will thrill the heart of the nation with peculiar grief. It will add a fresh shadow to the gloom that overhangs our stricken land. And, alas! it well may.

The death of Mr. Crittenden at any time death at this time is a national calamity. It is scarcely hyperbole to say that Mr. Crittenden was the good angel of our country. A man of the loftiest integrity, a patriot of unsurpassed fidelity and of unequalled magnanimity, a statesman of the most extended and varied experience and of unfailing sagacity, an orator whose golden eloquence was the thrice-refined spirit of a just and honorable conciliation, and the sole survivor in active life of the master-spirits of the last generation of statesmen, whose intellects and whose characters reflected upon us the glory of the statesmen of the Revolution as the mountain tops reflect the splendors of the dying day, he above all other men in the land, far above all other men, embodied the spirit and the principle to which under Providence every enlightened American looks for the salvation of the Republic. He more fully than any other man who survives him impersonated the true genius of American patriotism in this mighty struggle for the preservation of American nationality. He was indeed the glass wherein true patriots did dress themselves.

But he is no more! The good angel of our country has passed away. The mirror of patriotism and of all other noble qualities lies broken upon the earth. Death, the pitiless princely Crittenden is dead. Yet though dead he lives,-

Lives in death with glorious fame. May his deathless life beyond life inspire and guide his countrymen forevermore.

THE ISSUE.—The issue to be determined at weak and faithless but fleeting administration does not constitute the issue. Not at all. tively in terms too strong for the Union party of Kentucky. The Union party itself in its platform has solemnly condemned them in terms which the great conservative party of the North has formally adopted as its own. On this point the only difference between the Union party and the secession party is that while both condemn the misdeeds of the administration, the Union party, regarding those misdeeds as not only false in principle but adapted to aid the rebellion, condemns them in order to secure their correction as speedily as practicable, whereas the secession party, regarding them indeed as adapted to aid the rebellion, condemns them in order to make them more effectually aid the rebellion; and of course each party so condemns them as to accomplish its particular end. In other words both parties condemn the misdeeds of the administration, but the Union party condemns them for patriotic purposes in the way suited to accomplish patriotic purposes, when on the contrary the secession party condemns them for seditious purposes in the way suited to accomplish seditious purposes. This is the only difference between the two parties with respect to abolitionism. It is the old difference between the Union party and the secession party; and it points directly to the issue

now, which is, as we have said, the old issue

The misdeeds of the administration the Union party and the secession party both condemn. The Union party condemns those misdeeds with a resolution far deeper and more earnest than that with which the secession party condemns them. Every member of the Union ticket is pledged strenuously and unflinchingly to oppose them within the sphere of his lawful power; and the pledge will be faithfully redeemed. While, however, the Union party and the secession party agree in condemning the misdeeds of the administration. the two parties do not agree in the manner of correcting those misdeeds, or, rather, in the his whole influence for the triumph of the manner of dealing with them, for the secession party cannot be justly said to intend their correction at all. The Union party holds that the first and most imperative step is to maintain the government; and that the next step is to elect conservative men to Congress, to elect a conservative President, to direct public opinion with the utmost energy toward the same general end, and, in a word, to do everything that can be done under the forms of the government to correct the administration's misdeeds at the very earliest possible hour. In short, the Union party would correct the administration by maintaining the government, and by aiding in all legitimate ways to put it in the hands of the conservatives of the country. Such is the position of the Union party. The secession party, on the contrary, holds that the first and most imperative step is to withhold supplies from the government, thereby placing it at the mercy of the rebellion; and, as this step would insure the triumph of the rebellion, there would be no room for any further step. The first step in the secession programme would be the last. In short, the secession party would correct the administration by destroying the government. There is no form in which the secession platform can be fully stated which does not logically come to this result. Such is the position of the secession party.

Of course the design of the secession party is to subserve the rebellion. We speak not of Lazarus W. Powell and David Merriwether individuals but of the party. The design of at its head, pretends to be the Democratic the party as a party is to subserve the rebel- party. The Union party of Kentucky, with lion. LOUISVILLE JOURNAL stands out in a light so strong as to banish even the shadow of doubt. There can be no rational doubt on the subject.

And this brings us to the issue, which is simply the old issue of Union or Disunion. It more distinct view of the appalling consequences which must follow the triumph of the Disunion party. It is the old issue more strikingly defined. The unspeakable desolation and dishonor which heretofore the people of Kentucky have seen in the distance as the sure fruits of the triumph of the Disunion party now stare us all in the face so close that we may count their horrid features. Will the vision prove less potent when it sears the eye-balls of the people than when it appeared comparatively afar off? Will the men, who put down the Disunion party here when the fearful consequences of its triumph were discerned principally by the light of rational conjecture, now voluntarily precipitate those consequences when experience has shed upon them a light as broad as day, and when they glare

more revolting than ever before? Surely not. The rebellion is now consuming to ashes upon the funeral pile built by the rebellion itself. Whether or not it will expire indeed or rise phoenix-like to assail the government with renewed heart and vigor largely depends upon the result of the approaching election in Kentucky. The rebels themselves, as we have shown heretofore, declare that the possession of Kentucky would countervail their late reverses elsewhere, and that the defeat of MEANS THROUGH THE BALLOT-BOX, ALL MEET the Union party of Kentucky next Monday will pave the way for their possession of the State. This declaration is no mere speculation but a fact as reported to us by the Federal officer to whom in the disguise of a rebel guerilla the declaration was made. And the declaration is supported unanswerably by the character of the party opposed to the Union party of Kentucky and by the general condition of affairs in the Commonwealth and the Union. The rebels do not reckon withwould have been a national bereavement; his out their host. Unquestionably the secession party of Kentucky is the mere pioneer of the rebels in arms, and the triumph of the one at the ballot-box would be quickly followed by the advent of the other upon our soil under advandadvent of the other upon our soil under advandadvent of the union Democratic party of Kentucky is the mere pioneer of the tages coveted from the outset but never yet | Convention, WHEN HE HAD ON EVERY OF enjoyed. The position assumed by Bramlette, it is plain, implies that we are at sea without chart or compass. We are the victims of an overriding necessity. It is wrong to arm slaves; but if we don't tolerate it, then we get into the Confederacy, and their slaves are armed. Confiscation bills are all wrong; but our slaves for want of a fugitive slave law. cusable misrepresentation. Judge Bramlette's position, as stated unmistakably in his speech here, is that we must submit to these measures only until we can correct them under the forms of the government, which, as he declares, we should make upon us with a hideousness more terrible and every legitimate effort to do in the shortest possible time. Touching this general point, he said what is thus given in the sketch of his peech which we published:

These points of undying devotion and loyalty to the government, and the determination to adhere to it and preserve it at all hazards; the duty of the State Government to see the laws executed; THE CONDEMNATION OF THE ADICAL MEASURES OF THE FEDERAL ADMINIS-TRATION IN POWER, AND THE PLEDGE TO COR RECT THEM BY PEACEFUL AND CONSTITUTIONAL HIS MOST CORDIAL APPROVAL AND SUPPORT There is no issue made against them in Kentucky, and therefore there is no necessity to discuss them here, and he had not discusse them at length because they were entertaine in common by all the Union Democrats, and, as our opponents say they hold the same sentiments, there is therefore no issue to be taken with them. But the second resolution of our convention declared that the present causeless and wicked rebellion should be crushed by the whole power of the Federal Government, and the national authority restored over all the revolted States, and for the accomplishment whole resources if necessary. On this reso-FALTERING ADHERENCE TO IT, HIS EARNEST CORRECTED BY THE PEACEFUL AGENCY OF THE BALLOT-BOX, AND HIS DETERMINATION TO LABOR FOR THEIR CORRECTION BY THE BALLOT-BOX The reason of such assaults was to divert attention from the true issue between peace and happiness and glory of the Ameri- no-more-men-and-no-more-money party and and himself, and bring about a disc questions regarding which there is no division of opinion in Kentucky. To do this would be an idle consumption of time, and he chose rather to show where his account. rather to show where his opponents stood, and where the people ought to make them stand. THE EVILS RESULTING FROM THE ACTS OF THE FEDERAL ADMINISTRATION WE DESIRE TO CORRECT BY THE BALLOT-BOX. We may not accomlishthis soon in the present distracted condi-tion of our country. The withdrawal of the Senators and the Representatives from eleven States lost us the power to control measures for the prosecution of the war, and placed us in the hands of a majority opposed to us. We are opposed to these measures, and so are our opnents. We wish, WHILE PUTTING INTO OP ERATION EVERY PEACEFUL MEANS OF CORRECT rion, to correct them by a certain, radical, and erfect remedy, but they avoid the issue, and, f they mean anything by the cry of no more men and no more money, they mean a surren-der to the Confederacy, and take a roundabout way to say that secession shall prevail This is axiomatic, for we are all agreed in opposition to the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus, the conscription bill, the eman-cipation proclamation, the confiscation bill

VOTING LIMITS .- It should be remembered it has been judicially decided that the police line of the corporate limits of the city of Louisville, and not the tax line, determines the voting place of residents.

The funeral of the Hon. John J. Crittenden will take place on Wednesday at ten o'clock from his residence in Frankfort. We understand there was a very lively discussion at Warsaw on Monday last. Four candidates for Congress and two candidates for the Senate kept up the meeting for six hours. Captain Leathers, Dr. Doty, Mr. Menzies, and General Smith insisted upon their respective claims to a seat in Congress. Mr. the course of his remarks, deone M. M. Benton, giving his position ically as he himself has declared it, and adverted to the fact that Mr. M. M. B. was a ndidate for the Legislature in Kenton county, had been nominated by the Kenton deleion to the Covington Convention which inated General Smith. He called upon eneral Smith to answer and let the people of Gallatin know whether he would vote for Mr Benton or not. General Smith followed Mr. Menzies, but failed to answer the question. General S. did not answer another question which was put to him. He was asked if he would have voted for the "conscript bill." The people of the District do not know how the General would have voted on that question, although the vote of Mr. Menzies against it is the foundation of severe condemnation on the part of General Smith's friends. Gen. Smith, we are told, is attended by two civil aids, or a sort of political staff. As soon as the General got through with his speech, one of these aids brought to the Court-house a large bundle of hand-bills, and scattered them in the crowd. This hand-bill, which we have seen, consists of three newspaper pieces, and a little endacious stuff added by some Republican who gives no signature. The first piece is from some of the Grant delegation to the Covington Convention, and undertakes to answer our strictures on that meeting. It is enough to say of this piece, that one of its signers, Mr. A. M. Hume, declares that he tried, but tried in vain, to get the Union platform adopted at Covington. After that failure, it was his duty as a Union man, as it seems to us, to withdraw from a Convention that was shown to be Republican. The next piece is signed "Pendleton." This is understood to be written by an ancient lawyer at Falmouth, who shows that he is an administration man all through the article, and his effort was effectually answered by us at the time. Why did not Gen. Smith put "Pentleton" No. 2 into his handbill? The third piece is signed "A Loyal Citizen of the Sixth District." The writer, according to the hand-bill, is a gentleman of Harrison county. From his style and awkward guessing at facts he may be considered a blundering lawyer or a professional juryman. He says that "Mr. Menzies was a member of that (the Louisville) convention." This blunder ustrates the character of the whole article, which from one end to the other is heavy reasoning based upon misstatements. Mr. Menzies was not a member of that convention, Dut was refused a place among the delegates that represented Kenton, although there was a vacancy to fill, and his name was suggeted to them. The fatal objection to him that he was a Union man and not a Republican. The errors of the closing piece of this hand-bill are unworthy things, and are plain to the people of the District. We rejoice to hear that the prospects of Mr. Menzies' election are bright and brightening. We have full confirmation of the barbarous murder of surrendered Union men by

Morgan's fellow scoundrels in Cumberland county. When he crossed the river at Burkesville, early in July, he attacked a small detachment of the Ninth Kentucky cavalry in the bottom grounds of Marrowbone creek. Our men were overpowered by superior numbers; Capt. James Wilson, with others of the Twelfth Kentucky cavalry, hurried to their assistance, but reached the spot too late. Capt. Wilson informs us that he conversed with two of the men of the Ninth before they died, and they stated when Morgan's men dashed upon them and called upon them to surrender, knowing resistance to be useless, they did so. Their captors then demanded their pocketbooks and their guns, and afterwards deliberately shot them with their own weapons. Some of the mounted rebels leaned from their horses, placed their carbines to the very hearts of our poor fellows, and thus butchered them. As these facts can be proved beyond all controversy, we cannot see why some of the scoundrels of the Morgan gang should not suffer by way of retaliation. If Gen. Burnside wishes to take the matter up, Capt. James Wilson, of the Twelfth Kentucky cavalry, will furnish him all the necessary evidence. Young Al. Hynes, who was captured by Morgan, after a most gallant fight, at Bardstown, succeeded in effecting his escape at Winchester, Ohio. Morgan had Hynes conveyed in a carriage throughout his tedious march through Indiana and Ohio, and had given orders to shoot him if he attempted to

TO THE VOTERS OF THE THIRTY-EIGHTH SEN-ATORIAL DISTRICT, CITY OF LOUISVILLE. In accepting the call to be a candidate for the Senate of Kentucky at the next election, I deem it a duty to the voters of the district, more particularly to the upper Wards, to say who and what I am, and to define in a measure my position, for, although I have resided in Louisville since 1831, it has been in the lower Wards, and, as I am not a professional man, but a mechanic, working at my business, Thave not the same opportunity of being as well known to all of you as a person whose occupation naturally brings him before the public. So as to who I am, I will simply state I am William H. Grainger, who has been working at the foundery business in Louisville for the last thirty years. Now as to WHAT I am, I answer, a Union man, opposed to secession and rebellion in any shape, and in favor of every constitutional measure to restore the Union as it was before traitors attempted to break up what I believe to be the best government on the globe. I am in favor of furnishing both men and money to carry on the war to suppress the rebellion. I am not willing because the present administration has done things I cannot approve, to refuse men and money to carry on the war for the suppression of that rebellion, and so give up the Union. We can put up, for a time, with the mal-administration of a President and his ad-

I am opposed to the General Government's interfering with slavery in the several States. I am opposed to the Emancipation Proclamation and to negro soldiers, and there are other measures of the Administration I do not approve. But the administration of a government and the government itself are different. We can put up with the evils of the one for a time, because, as I before stated, we can in a legal manner correct the errors of the former, but, the government once destroyed by permitting secession to succeed, and so break up the Union, is an evil that never can be remedied; and while I will vote men and money to carry on the war against the rebellion, none will more gladly hail and welcome the return of the South to her place in the Union, or go further in guaranteeing them their just rights. I have thus given you a rough outline of my sentiments, and shall, if elected, endeavor to keep Kentucky a loval State in the Union, and to vote for measures to restore our country to its once happy condition. Very respectfully, 3 WM. H. GRAINGER.

see this Mill, which we do not hesitate to say will give better satisfaction and has more points of excellence than

ALL OTHER MILLS COMBINED. This mill is heavier than other mills of the same size, and the extra weight is placed at points so as to prevent the possibility of breakage, and all the brass journal boxes can be taken out, cleaned, repaired, clied, &c., and replaced without the least trouble of taking the mill to pieces (as is the case with all other mills which have not this improvement). The simplicity and neatness, combined with strongth, speaks for itself. And all who have used this mill do not hestate in saying it is the best mill in use.
